PB4L - Anti-bullying discussion and poster competition

We have explained words like 'la tyrannie' and 'le harcèlement' and talked about the explicit manifestations of such behaviour. Children now understand that the bully deliberately repeats the same behaviour in order to hurt the victim and that such behaviour is repeated frequently over a period of time, in particular because the bully finds it very difficult to change. We also discussed the notion of the 'victim' and the fact that the victim often cannot defend herself or himself.

We studied all forms of bullying and talked about the physical, verbal and material bullying, looking for the examples from our environment and identifying their main characteristics.

To show their stand against bullying RRS students were invited to design posters that would be displayed around the school.

We received MANY entries! The PB4L student team, made up of l'Envol students, were responsible for selecting the winners and giving out the prizes. Here are the 1st place holders (see if you can spot them when you come at school next):

Pop food

Using Pop Art artist Romero Britto as a model, Y5 and 6 students have adapted his work to fit our inquiry choosing an item of food or body part as the centrepiece of their art work. The mediums used were dye and black permanent marker.

What is happening?

Our inquiry

We are now able to draw a clearer picture of our year 1 to 4 students and their relationship with food. It is an opportunity for us teachers, to discuss many questions.

According to our inquiry:

L'Archipel's students love (over 90%) carrots, grapes, honey, jam, ketchup, milk, pancakes, milk, eggs and ice cream.

They also enjoy very much (over 80%): a wide range of fruits, sugar, yoghurt, hot dogs, burgers, biscuits, bread, lollies, crackers, popcorn, chips, pizzas, fries, juice and....water.

L'Archipel's children do not totally dislike anything, however, the least appreciated food are cauliflowers, spinach and courgettes.

L'Archipel's students have a clear idea of what is healthy food but are quite divided about what is unhealthy, except for chewing gum (72%). Other points of interest include:

- only 56% think soda drinks are unhealthy
- only 64% think fries & chips are unhealthy
- only 60% think lollies, donuts, popcorn and ketchup are unhealthy
- and 60% think garlic is unhealthy!

Food for thought...

Juniors have started an interesting art project on fruit and vegetables. They are learning to observe and sketch the lines and experiment forms in a pencil whisper, pencil talk and pencil shout technique. A lot of thoughts are going into our project in particular in deciding how to use the die effectively and make nice contrasts.
